Author D.A. Murray Reimagines Power in a World Built by Women and Ruled by Tech

In "Dominion: Ascension," women rule, men are controlled, and truth is engineered through technology. It's a dystopian world imagined by someone uniquely qualified to write it—D.A. Murray, a tech executive who understands exactly how systems are built, and how they break.

Murray offers more than a gripping story: she brings urgent insight. As the world debates the rise of AI, algorithmic bias, and digital control, she asks: what happens when tech doesn't liberate us, but defines us?

Whether you want a thought-provoking author interview or a conversation about power, autonomy, and what's coming next, Murray is the kind of guest who shows up with ideas your audience will be thinking about long after the episode ends.

Book D.A. to discuss these topics and more:

1. Power Flipped: How the Book Imagines Gender Roles Reversed

    - Why create a society where women lead every aspect of civilization?

    - What's the bigger message here—male vs. female, or something else?

    - Why is this story so timely right now?

    - How does the title of Book Two, Anarchy, hint at where this goes next?

2. Dani Matthews: The Evolution of a Rebel

    - Why is Dani the lens through which readers experience Dominion?

    - How does Dani's relationship with her mother shape the entire story?

    - Why is it important for you to bring human relationships to the forefront in this genre?

    - What do readers misunderstand about her age or emotional maturity?

3. The Breeder Class: Power, Fertility, and Choice

- Why did you create a world where the most revered male role is reproductive?

- What do men say about the book?

- What does this say about bodily autonomy?

- What do you hope this makes readers think about?

4. Technology, AI, and the Jagged Line of Progress

- How has your background in tech shaped this story?

- You've said Dominion is built "on the back of technology." What do you mean?

- Does technology move in a straight line, or is it jagged? What do you see happening in our world with AI?

- You've called AI "a Frankenstein." Why?

- Are businesses adopting AI faster than individuals?

- What guardrails do we need when it comes to AI?

5. Championing Women's Voices and #WritersInTech

- What is #WritersInTech, and why did you start it?

- Advice for balancing high-demand careers and creativity?

6. The Future of Dominion: A Trilogy of Transformation

- What can readers expect in the rest of the trilogy?

- What larger questions will the series explore?

- Can you see Dominion as a film or series?

Quotables

"We assume a matriarchy would be more gentle and just, but my writing shows that power corrupts, no matter who holds it."

"Technology doesn't just enable the world of 'Dominion,' it cages it."

"Rebellion isn't a single event. It's a series of awakenings that become too loud to ignore."

"AI could elevate us to our greatest potential, or make us stop thinking. We can't let it become our Frankenstein's monster."

"In a world where power is shifting from governments to corporations, the question becomes: Who gets to shape the future? Whose voices matter? That's where race and identity are deeply relevant."
